Students Witness Mock "Crash At Noon"

James Kimble
Connector Staff

Crushed metal, broken glass, a girl's scream over the death of a friend. It was a familiar scene, one found at many disasters caused by drunk driving.

The UMass Lowell Wellness Committee, in recognition of Alcohol Awareness Week, staged a drunk-driving "Crash at Noon" in front of Cumnock Hall on the university's North Campus last Thursday. The purpose of the crash was to sensitize students of the university to something that is

"It has a realistic touch," former Student Government member Dan O'Grady explained. "It exposes students to the realities of drinking and driving that they might not experience otherwise."

A few of the 300-plus students laughed at the initial staged screaming by the Class of 95's Vice-President Karen Zanni and left. Most students stayed. Sophomore Paul Bavuso later said, "At first, it was funny. Then it took effect. It makes you think."

The UMass Lowell Emergency Medical Service, in conjunction with the Lowell City Fire Department and Lowell's Trinity EMS, arrived at the blocked-off University Avenue, not wasting a second and responding as if the crash were real.

Gary Sepe, vice-president of Trinity EMS, stood in front of the taped-off section watching his men work. "People stop and look at the damage of a vehicle," he said, "and not the people in the accident." The Lowell Fire Department extracted one drunk driver using the "Jaws of Life". Another accident victim was dead on arrival. A hearse from O'Donnell Funeral Home collected the body. The driver was tested for drunkenness, failed, and was arrested.

Sepe hopes that students will "heighten their awareness [and] remember what they see here." For Sepe's men, as well as the Lowell Fire Department, the mock crash was good training. Unfortunately, they have to work with the real-life situation every weekend. "We video-taped our performance so we can watch it later to measure our performance," Sepe said.

The Wellness Committee of Residence Life has been performing mock crashes for at least five years, according to Chief Rowe of the UMass Lowell

Police Department. To Rowe, the crash was "exceptionally graphic. This is what really happens."

The drama on University Avenue was witnessed by unknowing onlookers from the passing traffic on nearby streets. The effect the mock crash had on students was apparent from their reaction. Jason Strunk, an American Studies major and UMass Lowell EMS member, confirmed the crash's authenticity as a "real life example. When you see something like this it makes a greater impact." UMass's EMS has responded to three vehicular accidents involving pedestrians and four motor-vehicle accidents this semester alone. Strunk related the mock crash to his experience with the EMS. "Everything was the same as today...only our accidents weren't alcohol related."

Alternative Energy Sources in Use at UMass

Have you ever wondered what the three-bladed propeller on top of Ball Hall is for? The generator is part of a turbine that turns wind into electricity for research in alternative energy sources. This study, funded by the New England Power Company, is being conducted by students in the Power and Renewable Energy section of the Electrical Engineering Department at UMass Lowell.

The generator, which has been in place for over a month, is 40 feet in height and can withstand wind speeds of up to 121 mph. The turbine starts producing electric power at a wind speed of 8 mph. Lowell's typical wind speed is 11 mph.

The view of the new generator on top of Ball Hall.

The system costs more than $20,000. The New England Power Company has provided a grant of $80,000 to the university to finance the two-year study.

Research is being done to determine the possibility of harnessing wind to provide electricity for a typical New England home. In the future, the system will hopefully be used to reduce a home's energy needs. "The idea is to give people who build their houses far away from power lines an alternative," said Ziyad Salameh, electrical engineering professor and chairman of the

THE CAMPUS VOICE

Safer Workplace

-Jordan Barab

April 28 was Workers Memorial Day, a day set aside by the American labor movement to remember those who have been killed or injured on the job, and to fight for better workplace protections.

This year, the observance of Workers Memorial Day takes on a special urgency. Not only is the Occupational Safety and Health Administration under unprecedented attack by the Republicans in Congress, but the Republican attack threatens all laws passed over the last decades that attempted to make our air, land, water, food, and workplaces safer.

The Republicans claim that the last elections gave them a clear mandate to take American society back to the past, not just back to before the passage of the environmental and workplace safety laws of the early 1970s, not just back to before the Great Society programs of the 1960s, and not just back to before the New Deal of the 1930s. They are attempting to bring us all the way back to the early days of this century, before the workplace and food horrors portrayed by muckraking journalists led to the first federal and state restrictions against the freedom of American businesses to pollute our environment, kill or maim workers, and poison our food and water.

The Republicans and their supporters in the business community are attempting to convince the American people that regulations are bad for business. They claim to be fighting to restore the great American tradition of individual decision-making from those who favor reliance on government regulations. They say it's a fight over who is going to control our lives: the government or the individual.

They are correct in arguing that we are engaged in a battle over control of our lives-but the battle is between workers, consumers and communities on one hand, and business interests on the other. One side believes that government regulation is one of the few means available to protect health and safety. The other side wants the "freedom" to do as it pleases, even if it means sick workers and devastated communities. The question is whether we see health, safety and environmental regulations as a barrier to personal freedom, or whether we see regulations as the only effective barrier to 19th century working and living conditions. History has shown us that without regulations, the health of workers and communities will take a back seat to profits and the corporate bottom line.

Republicans and businesses argue that complying with health and safety, environmental, and product safety regulations raises the cost of goods to the public. But let's look closer at this argument. First, when OSHA proposes a new workplace safety regulation, the affected industry always argues that it will be driven out of business, with the loss of thousands of jobs. Economist Ruth Ruttenberg has studied the impact of OSHA regulations for more than 20 years. She has found that "rather than burdensome, in many instances, compliance with regulations has actually enhanced productivity." Regulatory requirements have forced businesses to modernize and become more efficient.

But even if workplace health and safety, environmental or product safety regulations do add costs to products, is this bad? Actually, regulations make the "free market" work better. If a product is hurting workers, poisoning communities or causing birth defects, there is always a price to be paid. Without regulations, the victims and the taxpayers end up paying in dollars or in suffering-for environmental cleanup, hospitalization, unemployment insurance, bad health, lost limbs, and lost lives. Regulations that drive up the price of the polluting or dangerous product force the producers and users to pay to have the product or process made safer. Isn't it better that the producers and users pay for these costs rather than the workers on the production line or the communities that happen to be downwind?

The Republicans are not just limiting themselves to stopping the passage of new regulations. Republican leaders plan to sharply restrict OSHA's ability to enforce current regulations. Regulations would become voluntary and OSHA would focus on consultation. There's nothing wrong with consultation. In fact, there should be more of it. But now law can be effective if it uses only carrots and no sticks.

Workers are on the front line of many of our society's hazards. Chemicals that start out in the workplace end up in our rivers and air. If OSHA is weakened, more workers will lose their lives. We will all suffer. The health and safety of everyone who breathes air, drinks water, or eats food is at stake. The bills being bulldozed through Congress by the Republicans would effectively repeal every environmental, workplace, food and drug safety law passed during this century. This is not what people voted for last November. If we don't work together now and send a strong message to our lawmakers, next year we may be observing Worker, Environment and Community Memorial Day.

project." This system is just as reliable and is better than having to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars for overhead wires."

The computers in the research lab draw power from the system to simulate the electrical needs of a typical house.

To supplement the gathering of energy, solar panels are being added near the turbine on the roof. The panels are able to produce 2.5 kilowatts of power and the turbine can produce about 1.5 kilowatts.

The system also has batteries for windless, overcast days. "Right now, we have two days' worth of batteries in storage," said Salameh.

The turbine will save the university approximately $2000.

-Ziyad Salameh

When the study is concluded, the turbine will generate electricity for Ball Hall and will save the university approximately $2000, according to Salameh. "The system is working great and the utility company is supplying us with the money," said Salameh. "The great thing about this is it's free and causes absolutely no pollution."

A New House Bill Could Kill Direct Student Loan Program

by Marco Buscaglia
College Press Service

Rep. Ernest J. Istook has introduced the Student Loan Privatization Act, which would halt the Federal Student Loan Program initiated by President Clinton after this year.

"The direct loan program is a prime example of the kind of needless, destructive big-government intervention in the private sector that voters rejected last November," Istook said. "My bill would put an end to this nonsense by phasing out direct lending now before we waste more money on building another big bureaucracy."

Under direct lending, the federal government makes loans directly available to students through their respective schools.

Clinton has threatened to veto any legislation revoking the direct loan program, maintaining that the direct loans save the government money, students money and colleges and universities time and money.

"The direct lending program is far less expensive to run than the alternative," Clinton said in March at a White House press conference with college reporters. "It's pure ideology to say 'it costs a little money to run the direct loan program, and we don't have to hire one government employee, but we'd rather pay billions and billions and billions of dollars to banks that could be going for lower college costs to more students.'"

The Clinton administration had proposed saving $5.2 billion in outlays through the year 2000 by fully implementing the direct lending to 80 percent of new loan volume in academic year 1996-97 and to 100 percent of new loan volume in the academic year 1997-98.

The law creating the program calls for it to grow to at least 60 percent of new loan volume by 1998-99.

Clinton also said the government has strengthened efforts to collect payments from students and graduates who have defaulted on their loans, adding that the federal government has reduced loan defaults to $1 billion last year, down from $2.8 billion before he took office.

Istook, however, says private banks and lending agencies were doing a better job of cracking down on default rates before the direct loan program took effect. And despite Clinton's insistence that the program won't force a hiring binge in the Department of Education, Istook says direct loans will force the creation of a "500 person bureaucracy."

"Clinton claims that his direct lending scheme saves money, but common sense tells you that's nonsense," Istook says.

Many financial aid administrators, however, say Istook is the one talking nonsense, not Clinton.

"Anytime you cut down on paperwork and middlemen, you save money," says Kenneth Covington director of financial aid at the University of Dallas. "The program has success written all over it. The students and the administration are really behind it."

Many Republicans argue, however, that the greatest evil of direct lending is the administration's move to make a successful private program into public one.

"Direct lending will result in the nationalization of this nation's student loan industry," said Rep. John Boehner. "Instead of the current private-public partnership,

America will be faced with a government run system. The Department of Education thinks it can act as a bank better than banks themselves. Prior history suggests that direct lending will turn into another government mess."

Clinton, though, says the previous loan program was subsidized by the government anyway.

"The banks are guaranteed of getting their money back, so it's a no-lose situation for them," he said. "In the direct student loan program, we don't have guarantees to banks, we just make the loans directly. That has actually reduced the deficit and reduced the cost of college loans."

Currently, the federal government provides reinsurance for loans made by private lenders that are guaranteed by state or non-profit agencies. Money for the loans is raised by the U.S. Treasury Department through the sale of government securities. If banks aren't successful at securing repayment for individual loans, they are reimbursed from the federal government.

Daniel Cheever, chairman of the Coalition for Student Loan Reform, a group made up of representatives from guarantee agencies and lenders, says Clinton's direct loan plan was put in place before being adequately tested.

"The private-public partnership was working well for both parties," Says Cheever. "We oppose a move to a full-blown loan program before Congress knows whether direct lending is really in the best interests of students, schools and the taxpayers."

Although Istook's bill will be voted on sometime this spring, other Republicans support a similar but less drastic bill, the Student Loan Evaluation and Stabilization Act of 1995, which caps the program at 40 percent of all loan volume at colleges and universities until sufficient information on its effectiveness can be studied.

From Campuses Around the Nation

Preserving History on the Net

Ithaca, N.Y. - Before the nation's history - or at least the paper on which it was recorded - crumbled to dust, two universities are storing historical documents in a safe place: cyberspace.

In the first phase of the "Making of America" project, Cornell University and the University of Michigan are converting 5,000 volumes of 19th century pamphlets, periodicals, speeches, letters and memoirs into digital files. Other research institutions later will join the project and help scan the other 95,000 volumes to be included in the computerized library.

By putting the collection - both in progress and in its entirety - on the Internet's World Wide Web, librarians and faculty at the schools want not only to preserve the documents, but to make them available to more students and scholars.

Researchers will be able to convert the images to computer text, search for the documents they want, and then look at or print them out in their original forms.

Librarians will compare the costs of scanning the documents and putting them on the Web to the current method of microfilming and photocopying them. They will also study how the digital form affects research, communication, teaching and publication, as well as how to make it easy to use.

"We want to see if we can make a sufficient case for scholars to change the way they do things," said Anne Kenney, a Cornell project leader and associate director of the university library's preservation department.

The first volumes entered will reflect the voice and popular opinion of the mid to late 1800's, through the Civil War and reconstruction, Kenney said. The initial work will be funded by a $750,000 grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, which has helped several research libraries get wired.

Majority of New Teachers Avoid Urban Schools

Carbondale, Ill. - The best-trained education majors are choosing to teach where they're needed least, according to an education researcher at Southern Illinois University.

Most newly trained teachers are choosing to teach in small towns and suburbs instead of urban schools, where trained teachers are badly needed, said Sharon L. Gilbert, associate professor in SIUC's Department of Curriculum and Instruction.

"The majority of prospective teachers intend to return to small towns to teach middle-income children of average intelligence in traditionally organized schools," Gilbert said.

The shortage of trained teachers in urban schools may be the greatest source of educational inequity for poor and minority urban students, Gilbert said.

Because of the shortage, urban schools frequently hire people who may be college graduates but have had no teacher training, which means they are ineligible for state certification as teachers. "They won't teach as effectively as those who train and prepare to teach," said Gilbert, adding while these teachers may know their particular field well, they often don't understand child development.

A recent survey Gilbert conducted with 193 prospective teachers reinforces previous research that shows most teachers come from rural settings and plan to return to similar settings to teach.

"We see white, female, monolingual, monocultural students entering teaching," she said. Most of them come from non-urban areas and attend universities in non-urban settings close to their homes. "There aren't many students coming into teacher preparation from ethnic groups."

But not all the news is grim. While one-quarter of all newly hired teachers in urban schools lack teacher training, one-quarter are very well-trained, having earned master's degrees, said Gilbert.

Who Was Rebecca?

Boonville, Calif. - Ever wonder what use it was to read some of those sappy novels assigned to you in English class?

If one of those novels happened to be Daphne du Maurier's "Rebecca," it could just win you a trip to England.

An essay contest is seeking answers to the question: who was the infamous Rebecca? Was she the depraved heartless woman who led Maxim deWinter to murder? Was she the epitome of feminine beauty that fueled Mrs. Danvers's madness? Or was she every second wife's nightmare: the woman her husband can't forget?

If the answers to these questions have been burning in your soul since your sophomore year literature class, or if you just think visiting the English countryside would be really cool, here's your chance to tell in 500 to 800 words "Who Was Rebecca."

Essays will be judged on originality, development, style and clarity and must be typewritten and double-spaced. Entries must be postmarked by June 15, 1995.

Send entries to: "Who Was Rebecca" Essay Contest, Manderly, P.O. Box 880, Boonville, CA 95415.

How about a career in the Music Industry

Do you have the desire to pursue a career in the $50 billion Music Business? do you write and perform their own music and would like to learn how to start making money from their creations? Have you always wanted to work at such companies as: Sony Music, Epic Records, A&M Records, North Shore Music Theatre, Polygram Records, Wang Center for the Arts, Columbia Records, Merrimack Repertory Theatre, or WBCN?

The University of Massachusetts Lowell has just announced the revision of its innovative and fully accredited curriculum designed to prepare students for today's Music Industry. As an alternative to the strictly traditional music degree program, the Bachelor of Music Degree with Music Business Emphasis combines a traditional music curriculum with industry related courses and experiences. The program focuses on music business, management, marketing, sales, publishing, retailing, promotion, and record and live concert promotion and management, and prepares well-rounded graduates who are knowledgeable in all aspects of the Music Industry.

The new program includes 141 units in the following areas:

Music	67 units
Music Business	27 units
Business Administration	27 units
General education	20 units

The Music Business portion includes studies in the following areas:

Music Business I

A systematic look at career options in the Music Industry. Topics discussed include: song writing, music publishing, national and international copyright law, music licensing, artist management, and concert promotion.

Music Business II

A systematic look at career options in the music Industry. Topics discussed include: music merchandising, arts administration, record promotion, marketing, and distribution, radio and television broadcasting, advertising and jingle production, and film scoring.

Computers in Music Business

An introduction into the use of Macintosh, DOS, and other computer systems and software applications used within the Music Industry. Topics will include information management, problem-solving process, computer logic, memory, input/output, storage media, data base concepts, networks, data communication, information systems function, analysis, development, and control, multi-media, and the use of such applications as: WORD, EXCEL, WordPerfect, Lotus 124, PageMaker, FileMaker Pro, and Finale.

Music Promotion and Merchandising

An in-depth study of the principles and application of marketing, promotion, and distribution of products within the Music Industry. Case studies of various music products and companies will be studied and analyzed.

Music Business Entrepreneurship

An in-depth study of how to successfully start a business within the Music Industry. Case studies of successful entrepreneurs and their companies will be researched and analyzed. Students will develop a written Business Plan for their own Music Business enterprise.

Music Publishing, Copyright, and Contracts

An in-depth study of the legal environment within the Music Industry. Topics discussed include: music publishing, national and international copyright law, live performance, managers & agents, music organizations, recording agreements, music publishing, film and television music production, and music merchandising, and other contractual obligations.

Music Business Career Seminar

Prepares students to undertake their Internship by providing an in-depth study of how to prepare to successfully enter a career path.

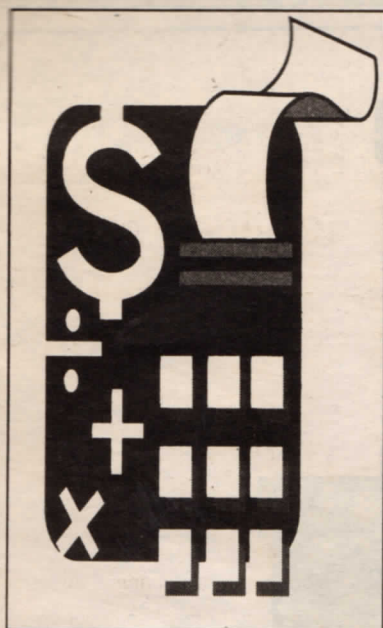

Music Business Internship

Students will complete a 15-week Internship at a company in the Music Industry which offers a varied, practical, and challenging learning experience. This Internship will be supervised by a Sponsor from the company and the Coordinator of the Music Business Program.

Our graduates are employed throughout the Music Industry. Many of whom began their career through their Internship at such companies as:

Sony Music, Rykodisc, Epic Records, IRS Records, A&M Records, WBCN, BMG Music Publishing, Columbia Records, Merrimack Repertory Theatre, National Association of Music Merchants, Aaron Concert Management, North Shore Music Theatre, Polygram Records, Rounder Records, Timeless Music, Benson Music Group, Hit & Run Music Publishing, Wang Center for the Arts, Turning Point Records, Sonic Solutions, Deranian Design Group, KCSC, Robert Walker Enterprises, New Sound Rounder Records Group, Calliope Productions, WMJX, Grover Pro Percussion, TIC-FM, Library of Congress, Sullivan Video Services, EMI Publishing, Copyright Management, New England Performer Magazine, Yamaha, Great Northeast Productions, Agent 0007 Management, UNI Record Distribution.

Pre-Law Students Say

They're Not In It For The Money

New York - What motivates people to go to law school? Money? Prestige? Or could it be that they're just plain interested in the law? In a recent survey of future law school students conducted by Kaplan Educational Centers, 38% of respondents say they are attracted to the legal profession by a long-term interest in law; 8% cite financial rewards; and a mere 2% say they are drawn by its prestige. But when asked what attracts other applicants, 62% point a finger at their peers: They say others are in it for the money.

So, what do these future lawyers expect to earn? In their first year out of law school, respondents say they expect a salary of up to $60,000; in three years out, they anticipate their salary will fall within the range of $60,000 to $80,000.

Kaplan, the nation's leading test preparation company, surveyed a nationwide sample of its students preparing for the Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) on salary expectations and their views on the legal profession. "Because Kaplan sees thousands of pre-law students each year before they matriculate," said Jonathan Grayer, Kaplan's president and CEO, "we are able to identify national trends early on."

The survey also revealed that students see some drawbacks to a legal career. 26% of respondents say the most unappealing characteristic of a career in law is a competitive job market, while 24% cite long hours. Other drawbacks include the poor image of lawyers and the tedium of legal work.

Other findings include the following:

- Forty-four percent of respondents would defend a client even if they knew he/she were guilty.
- Sixty-one percent of the respondents say the public image of lawyers is worse than it was five years ago; 62% say the earning potential is less.
- Fifty-four percent of respondents say they plan to pay for law school through loans.
- Respondents rank academic reputation as the most important quality in a law school.

Kaplan is one of the largest educational companies in the country, offering courses, books, videos, on-line services and digital products. With 160 centers and more than 1,500 classroom sites throughout the U.S. and abroad, Kaplan prepares 150,000 students annually for college and graduate admissions exams, as well as professional licensing and language exams. Kaplan is a wholly-owned subsidiary of The Washington Post Company, which also owns Newsweek magazine.

Arts & Entertainment

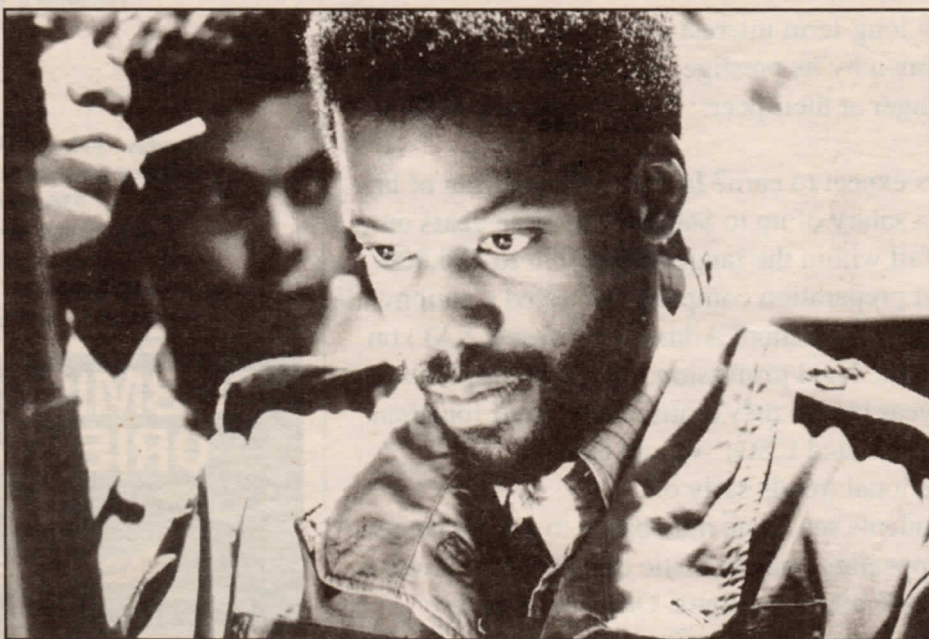

PANTHER accurate, compelling portrayal of history

Joe Eubanks

Arts & Entertainment

PANTHER is an excellent film which was written and produced by the father and son team of Melvin and Mario Van Peebles. In this film, comedian and political activist Dick Gregory played the stalwart Rev. Slocum. Having someone as well recognizable and as important as Dick Gregory in a film is a victory in itself because he commands attention. After years of suppression and lack of interest, someone has done a marvelous job of putting the history of the Black Panther Party on film.

PANTHER dramatizes the Black Panther movement, which began in 1966 in Oakland, CA, when the Black Panther Party for Self Defense was formed in response to the harassment and violence being suffered by the black community at the hands of the police. Vietnam vet, Judge (Kadeem Hardison,) returns home to Oakland after being injured in the line of duty. Judge soon begins to notice the presence of the Black Panthers and is impressed by what he sees. Armed with knowledge of the law, and the passion to empower their community, the Panthers,

Kadeem Hardison as Judge in Gramercy Picture's impressive PANTHER

led by Huey Newton (Marcus Chong) and Bobby Seale (Courtney B. Vance,) have been policing the police and monitoring their activities. Judge's good friend Cy (Tyrin Turner) introduces him to Huey and the Black Panther credo which forever changes Judge's life. After being taken into Huey's confidence, and pressured by the police to act as their informant on a group Hoover labeled "Public Enemy #1", Judge raises the suspicions of a Panther named Tyrone (Bokeem Woodbine). The eventual and impending flooding of the Oakland ghettos with an overabundance of heroin, a solution tailored by the FBI in association with organized crime, eventually lead to the demise of the Panthers.

Melvin Van Peebles purposely wanted to expose the inner workings of COINTELPRO, one of the major surveillance units of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. One of the main goals of then FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover was to destroy the Black Panther Party and if nothing else, to discredit them in the eyes of the American people. The U.S. Government sold the naive idea to America that the Black Panthers(BPP) were nothing but gun-toting Black militants. At the height of their popularity, the BPP conducted food and breakfast programs for hungry children, provided schooling and sickle cell anemia testing and gave free shoes away. The media spoke very little of these community activities but always spoke of their standing up to police and "rebellious" actions.

PANTHER is a part of American history that finally gets told and it definitely needed to be told. Technically the film could have been better, but the film's budget was tight, which probably accounts for the movie's technical flaws. PANTHER is a film that everyone should go see because it chronicles an important part of history that has been twisted by the government and the press for their own purposes. There is an old adage that states that "One should know the truth and the truth shall set you free." (Rated R)

Clancy: The Great Entertainer Part IV By Kevin Winters

So there I was in my father's diner with two strange men dressed in suits waiting to meet me. Since graduation I'd been doing stand up comedy all around the state. I tried to do as much as my college schedule would allow. I really loved the excitement of performing. "So you want to see me?" I asked the gentlemen. "How would you like to be in the Ed Sullivan Show?" asked the first man. He was the Executive Producer of the show. "This would be your agent, Christopher Bourrassa." Mr. Bourrassa stood up and shook my hand.

"The Ed Sullivan Show!" I was shocked. "Wait a minute--how do you know me and how did you find me."

"Well, I believe a friend of yours from Sullivan High wrote me a letter. I think his name is Mr. Braham." He pulled out the letter and showed it to me. The letter was to Mr. Bourrassa. Mr. Braham had told him I had a great gift--the gift of making people laugh. He then proceeded to tell him how I was doing comedy at different locations around New York. Mr. Bourrassa then informed me he had caught my act a few times and was very impressed.

I stood up from the table and started walking back and forth in front of the table where the two men were seated. They were watching me intently.

"Yes! Yes! I'll do it!" I shouted as I shook their hands.

"We would also like you to entertain in a few of our clubs in New York City?" said the Executive Producer. They said they would get back to me soon with some paper work, contracts and schedules.

When they walked out, I shut the door behind them and began to shout. "I'm a star! I'm a star!" The people in the diner all turned to look at me and Gina dropped her tray of dishes. My father was in a state of shock. All he could mutter was "The Ed Sullivan Show? The Ed Sullivan Show?"

"Yes, can you believe it, and I got myself an agent!" I was so excited that I began to sing, "Hollywood here I come!"

"But how did this happen?" My father finally asked.

"It's a long story Dad, but it has to do with Mr. Braham. I must go see him right away to thank him."

"Let's celebrate," said my father. He brought out some cake, ice cream and a bottle of champagne that he had been saving for a special occasion. Well after the little party I went over to thank Mr. Braham. You made my dreams come true, I told him. He told me he thought they were never going to come and see me because he had written the letter six months ago.

That summer I began entertaining in night clubs throughout New York City. I recalled one of my worst nights was when I stayed over night at a terrible hotel. It was filthy and hot. I couldn't sleep all night. I was in a tough section of New York and I did not feel very safe. I was lonely and homesick. I missed my family and my friends. I called Stacy that night and she urged me to stick it out. She did keep asking me when I was coming back. I kept on telling her soon.

That September I was at The Ed Sullivan theater in New York City. My family, friends and Stacy were there to watch my performance. The audience cheered when Ed Sullivan walked on stage. "All right we have a really "big shew" tonight!" Ed Sullivan announced folding his arms. The guest who were to appear that night were Nat King Cole singing "Unforgettable" and Lucille Ball. I came last. I was the newcomer. When he announced my name I felt sick to my stomach. I could not believe I was on the same stage as all these wonderful stars. When it was my time to perform I immediately felt comfortable with the audience. I started doing my impersonation routine. People were laughing. At the end of the show Lucille Ball, Nat King Cole, Ed Sullivan and I were all singing. "That's Entertainment." I had a great time. Mr. Sullivan wanted me to comeback, again some time in the future.

Time went by quickly and I was becoming more and more established as an entertainer. I was on the road often now and traveling to many cities. When I finally reached Hollywood my agent found me some prime parts in the movies. I remember my first day in Hollywood, I met James Stewart. A couple of weeks later one of the casting directors asked me to be in an MGM Musical Comedy. I was thrilled. After my first big break I appeared in four more movies and they were all big hits. I was becoming famous. I could have any girl I wanted, but I was still in love with Stacy. But I only got to see her at Christmas along with my family.

In 1962, I received a phone call from President John F. Kennedy. He wanted me to perform at the White House. Meeting President Kennedy was one of the greatest highlights of my life. I had a fabulous time at the White House; I greatly admired him.

During the Academy Awards Ceremony, they wanted me to do a comedy skit, and I did. I also went on tour in London, Dublin, Madrid and Paris; it was beautiful. But in Paris I had an embarrassing episode. I was walking back to my hotel room drunk as a skunk one night after a party. My room was 312 but I walked into Room 212. The door was unlocked so I opened it not realizing I was in the wrong room. I walked over to my bed and there were two girls sleeping in the two twin beds. My God two girls in my room? I whispered to myself. I just wanted to sleep. So I laid down on the bed next to one of the girls. Suddenly she woke up and saw me-- she screamed. I jumped up and then the other girl screamed. "What are you doing here!" She demanded as she pushed me off the bed. I stood up and said. "This is my room!"

"Like hell it is!" She picked up the phone and dialed the police.

"Wait a minute...what room is this?"

"Room 212."

"Oh my God I'm so sorry-- please don't call the police. I'm in the wrong room." So I quickly stumbled out the door and into the elevator. I was very lucky.

Time passed quickly and it was now 1964, I was still in Hollywood. I was living in a beautiful apartment; I loved it but I still missed my family. I had just found out Stacy was acting in a New York Off Broadway Play. She was also living in an apartment in New York City. I was happy for her and wrote her a long letter. I told her I might be home soon. I had some ideas for a show of my own. I also told her I had not been happy because I missed her so much. I bared my heart and soul to her. I told her how much I loved her. I mailed the letter that night. Well, I never heard from her. She never returned my phone calls. I began to drink heavily. I wanted to see her. My Agent suggested I take a break and go to New York City to visit her.

I took a flight to New York City, the day before Christmas Eve. I went straight to her apartment but she was not home, so I sat down on her steps and waited. I was freezing in the dark dismal hallway. After an eternity of waiting I heard footsteps coming up the stairs. I stood up and it was Stacy. I was excited to see her.

"What! What are you doing here?" She asked. I saw a strange man behind her.

"I came to see you. Stacy, didn't you get my letter?" And who is that?" This was not the response I had expected from my Stacy.

"Clancy this is John. We're engaged to be married."

I was speechless and the room began to spin.

WJUL Spotlight Show: "Old Tyme Radio Theater"

Kristen Tomaino
WJUL Contributor

WJUL 91.5 FM has been broadcasting "Old Tyme Radio Theater" Sundays from 6:00 to 10:00 p.m., hosted by Wayne Braverman. Wayne brings back the feel of what radio used to sound like during the "golden age". He mixes old recordings of shows that were popular around the early days of radio with other types of shows leading up to the present. These include comedies, dramas, interviews, cartoons, editorials, mysteries, horror shows, old tunes, and comical commercials in between featured shows.

Many times Wayne chooses recordings of shows that deal with certain themes. For Christmas, he played "A Christmas Carol" and everyone's favorite cartoon, "A Charlie Brown Christmas". For Halloween, he played Charlie Brown's "The Great Pumpkin," the original recording of "The Phantom Of the Opera," the Broadway musical version of that same show, Orson Wells's "The War Of the Worlds," and various recordings of horror stories. At one point, Wayne turned one of his themes into a 5-week series on crime and the law. He started off the first of the five weeks with recordings dealing with criminals, and ended his series with stories of court cases.

For another one of his shows, he played a recording of "Bonnie and Clyde" and mixed it with an interview with Bonnie's sister about the couple that added themselves to history.

Most of his older recordings are from the Deluxe Radio Theater and the Hollywood Radio Theater. Some of them feature stars such as Cary Grant, Mickey Rooney, and Burns and Allen.

Every Sunday evening Wayne has been bringing a touch of history into peoples' homes. Not only is he extremely knowledgeable about the recordings that he presents each week, but he also adds a touch of humor and honesty into his show. He takes pieces of history and brings them to life. According to WJUL's Toni Pennacchia, Wayne is known around the station as a "WJUL legend." In fact, April 30th was celebrated as Wayne's 20th anniversary of being a station member! Thanks for all of your support and dedication to the station, Wayne.

News Reading Service on WJUL

Tony Janeczek
WJUL Contributor

The UMass Lowell radio station, WJUL has begun regular broadcasts of the Massachusetts Talking Information Centers' Reading Service Program. The Reading Service is aired Monday through Friday from 7:00 a.m. to 8:45 p.m.

The Massachusetts Talking Information Center provides programs and information for the visually impaired. Most of the material presented consists of magazine articles featured in national publications.

"We feel that this is a good alternative to the strong news programs heard on many other stations in the area" according to Alex Buck, WJUL program director. "After the national and local news airs at 7:00 a.m., the Reading Service presents magazine articles on a variety of topics."

For more information regarding reading services for the blind, contact the Talking Information Center at 1-800-696-9505. WJUL is operated by student volunteers and broadcasts on 91.5 FM.

For more information contact:

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Why?, If Diversity is a Valuable Thing.

This is going to be my fourth year in the United States and in this university, and I have participated in intramural tournaments every semester. I do not have a feeling of satisfaction or failure for playing at the school, I just have the one of disappointment. In all those semesters playing the sport that I love, I have not been treated with respect by some people that work as referees and organizers of the intramural tournaments. I have been ignored, when I had something to say, yelled at, and treated with very rude manners.

Every semester my team has been kicked out of the tournament (6 except for the last one) for any stupid reason. This spring is not going to be different, my captain received a call from Recreational Sports this morning to inform him that we were about to be disqualified because a person cheering us in yesterday's game "misbehaved". It seems like if it bothered them that me and other international students get together to play. I do not believe these members of Recreational Sports treat the other teams the same way they do mine.

Probably because in the team we are all foreigners, the persons from the staff think we have troubles understanding English, or that we do not know the rules of soccer, so they have to raise their voice and be more harsh, so that we learn. Treating some teams different that others is not professional, and they cannot take certain things for granted to excuse that behavior.

I know respect is something you earn, and some of my friend sand I have earned it, as students, friends, and players. There have been others that play with us that have not been respectful either to the staff, but people should not judge many by the behavior of a few.

When I go home and I see foreigners visiting my country I feel proud, because they came from far away to know more about my culture and my people. I enjoy their company and want to make them feel as comfortable as I can. I do not understand why other people would not do the same.

Remember how your 2nd grade teacher seemed smarter to you than your first grade teacher?

And how proud you were because you were smarter too! And when you first sat there in your high school on opening day the teachers seemed like geniuses.

Well, I had a second grade teacher who later became my high school teacher, and she was smarter...no kidding!

How did she get smarter? You think that's weird?

My dumb parents are getting smarter!

But this is not a Star Trek movie...no...no...I've been watching my dog and he's not getting smarter...he's still eating food off the floor.

I stopped that years ago!

The Best Way To Save Money On Stuff (Other Than Borrowing Your Roommate's.)

Roommates tend to get weird when you borrow their stuff. (They're funny like that.) Better to get yourself a MasterCard® card. Then you could use it to buy the things you really want.

And with these College MasterValues® coupons, you'll save up to 40%. And until you get your own place, it's the smartest thing you can do. Roommates are weird enough as it is. MasterCard. It's more than a credit card. It's smart money.™

The UML Literary Society

is recruiting new members and officers for next semester.

The UML Literary Society is a University of Massachusetts Lowell club dedicated to the promotion and enjoyment of literature. The club's philosophy is that literature is an important part of academic, emotional, philosophical, and social development, and that it can be entertaining. The club emphasises diversity in genre, theme, perspective, and style by organizing and attending presentations and workshops, sponsoring and participating in cultural trips and community service, publishing a national and university literary journal, and networking with other clubs and colleges. Membership is limited to those UML students willing to participate in at least two events per semester, provide demographic information for record keeping, and enjoy themselves. Currently, the club has about 40 members of different majors. This year, several of the officers and members are graduating and hope to "pass the torch" on to other undergraduates. In this spirit, then, the officers and club members have offered the following invitation. Expose yourself to the world... of Literature!

Next meeting Wed., May 4-26. Applications taken for officers at that time—See Marilyn J. Masker

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS, FACULTY AND STAFF!

Senior Week Tickets can now be purchased by all!

SGA NEWS

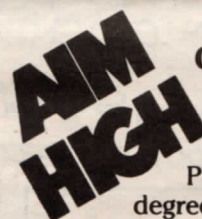

This week's Connector has a very special insert - your very own course evaluation sheet!

Take the sheet to any SIC, the SGA office, or any department office to find the ID number of the course you wish to evaluate. (Look for the bright pink book, which contains all UML courses and gives their ID numbers).

You can also call the SICs or SGA x5004 to get the ID#. Once you've got this number, you can evaluate your course.

Leave the form in any SIC or mail to the SGA office (Box 940) by the end of finals, and it will be included in the publication for the fall.

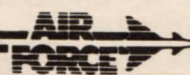

Thanks and Good Luck on your finals!

Greatest Walk-A-Thon Ever

Merrimack Valley's Depression Workshop is sponsoring its Third Annual Walk-A-Thon on Sunday, May 21, at 9am; rain date: Sunday, June 4. This year's event promises to be the biggest ever.

Depression is the leading cause of death from suicide in this country. The Depression Workshop, a charitable, non-profit corporation headquartered in Tewksbury is now in its 12th year of helping those that suffer with depression and their friends and families. The Workshop has groups that meet in Billerica and Lowell. One of the Lowell groups, the Lowell General Hospital group that meets at 7pm on Friday nights is having its First Anniversary celebration on May 5.

Because the suicide rate seems to be steadily rising, the need for help is greater than ever. At the same time, medical and insurance costs are rising while government funding and insurance coverage is declining. That is why more and more people are volunteering to help the Walk-A-Thon committee in many ways, and are obtaining sponsors and walking for the cause. This year's event will be held in Tewksbury. After the six mile walk there will be a free buffet with a large variety of hot and cold food and beverages for all participants. Everybody is welcome to participate.

The Walk-A-Thon committee needs a variety of workers as well as walkers. Anyone can be of help.

Call Ernie Poirier at (508)251-4739 or call Workshop headquarters at (508)858-0272 for information on how you can help. The Walk-A-Thon committee must have a final count of the member of walkers no later than May 7, so don't delay. This is to ensure that there will be plenty of food on hand.

The Workshops don't charge a fee for attending, they pass a can around and ask for a donation of $5 from each person—some donate more, some less, and those that can't donate at all are still welcome.

The Workshops receive no government funding, they operate solely through donations and events such as the Walk-A-Thon. That's why they need your help and donations. So, if you can't volunteer or walk, you can send your tax deductible check or money order to: The Depression Workshop, Inc., 1126 Chandler Street, Tewksbury, MA 01876; and be sure to specify "For Walk-A-Thon". Last year was great, but this year with your help, it will be even greater.

STUDENTS BEWARE!

The Spring Term is quickly coming to an end. If you need a Student Loan to meet your financial responsibilities to the University, please drop by the Student Loan Office to speak to one of our Loan Counselors. The Loan Office is located in the McGauvran Student Center. Hours are 8:30am to 5pm.

It may be too late if you wait much longer. Students who have processed loans and are waiting for the loan disbursements to reach the University are reminded that they need to complete Entrance Interview requirements, if they haven't already. Remember, loan disbursements need to be negotiated within 45 days of the schools' receiving them.

Attention, Current and Future Commuter Students!

Now available:

"Apartment Hunting Tips"

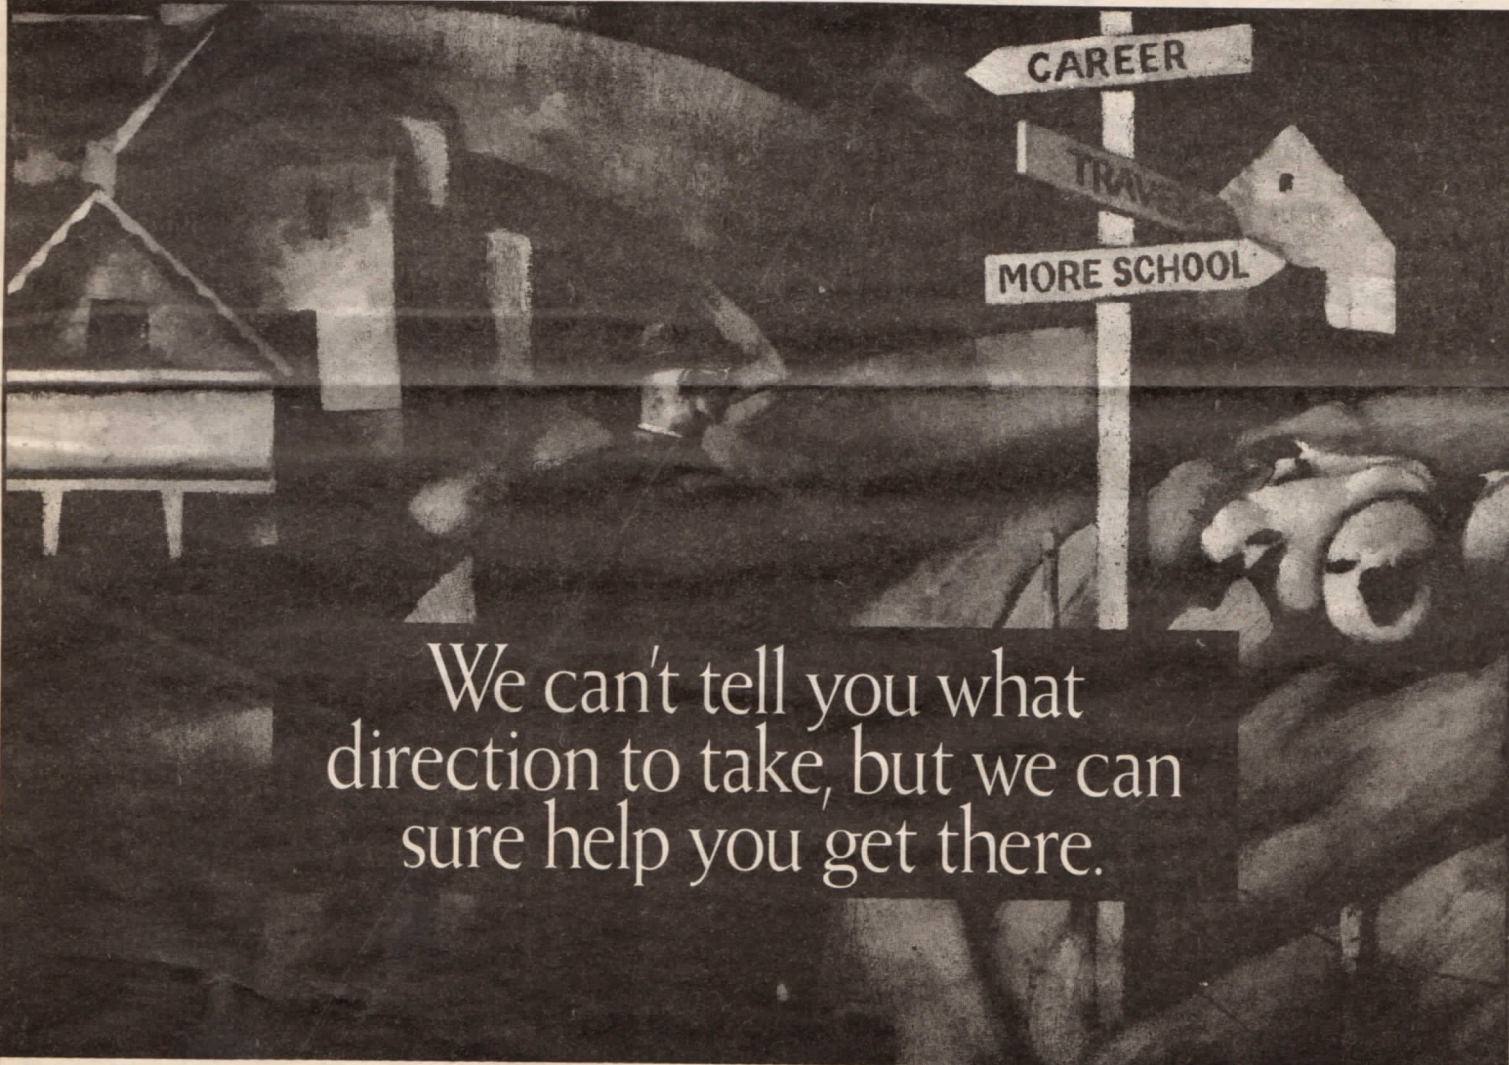

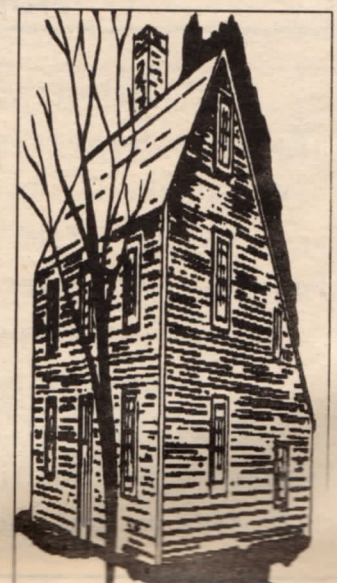

Are you now—or will you soon be—looking for an apartment? Before you begin, pick up your free copy of "Apartment Hunting Tips," prepared especially for students. This guide includes:

"How to Find an Apartment," "Selecting an Apartment," "Inspecting the Apartment," "Before Signing a Lease," "Upon Moving In," and "Neighborhood Relations." A checklist entitled, "Apartment Review: Statement of Conditions," appears at the end.

To get your free copy of the "Apartment Hunting Tips" handout, just stop by the Office of Student Activities, Student Centers, and Commuter Services located in McGauvran 224, South Campus (or call x5001).

(While you're at the office, you may want to find out what other services this office offers for commuters.) Happy apartment hunting!

We can't tell you what direction to take, but we can sure help you get there.

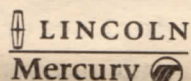

Whichever direction you decide to take, we can help you get there in style, with a brand new Ford or Mercury.

UML Sweeps NECC Awards

Patrick Comeau
Connector Staff

Last week the New England Collegiate Conference announced their selections for rookie and player of the week. These awards are presented to four individuals, two from softball and two from baseball teams in the league. On some occasions there will be a college that will have two, maybe three athletes given this honor, but never four. That is until now.

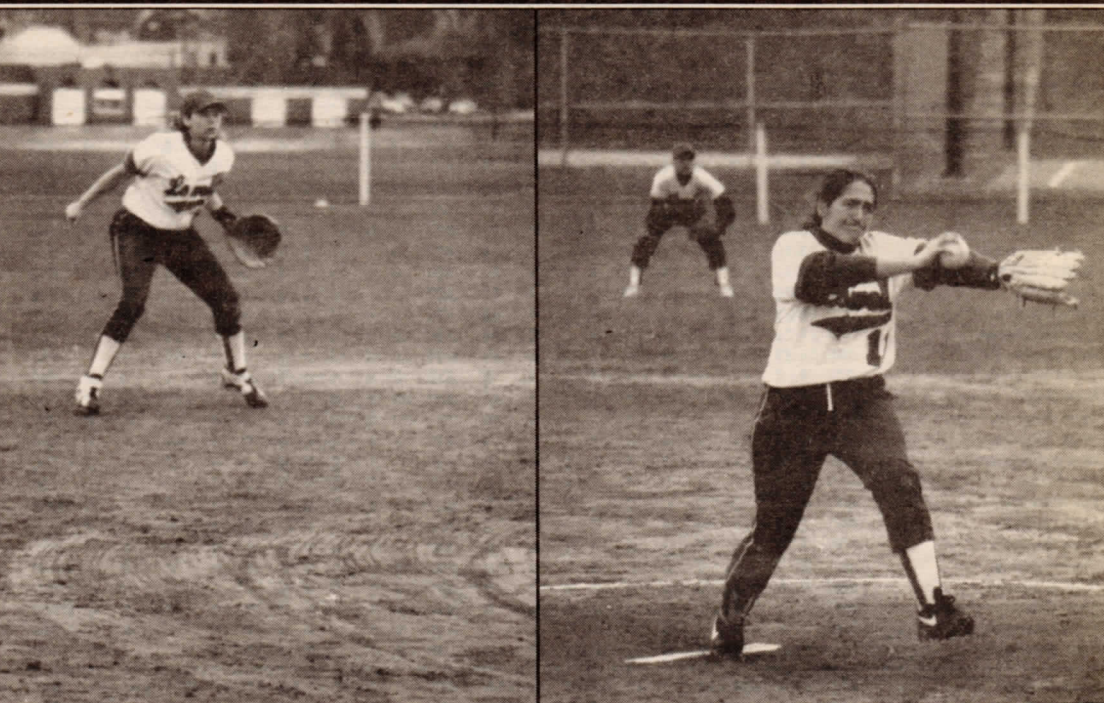

Lowell monopolized all the awards this week, taking both rookie of the week and player of the week in both baseball and softball. In the 13 year existence of the NECC, this was the first time any one school has swept all four categories. Winning all four awards in the same week is a testament to the excellence that Lowell Baseball has sustained all season long, as well as the amazing turnaround the UML softball team had over the last half of the season.

Freshman sensation Melissa Ottaviano took home her second Rookie of the Week honor in three weeks in the NECC. Ottaviano earned the honor this week by contributing 18 innings of stellar pitching for 3 wins while maintaining a 0.78 earned run average. As Ottaviano continues to stop the River Hawks' opponents scoring efforts, her teammate Donna Mills leads the way at the plate.

Mills was the most consistent hitter on the squad for the entire 10-week season. For the week she was honored, Mills had 5 doubles, 2 triples, a home run and 10 runs batted in. Mills also scored 15 times in the 6 game frenzy last week. It was the combination of excellent fielding at short stop and performance at the plate that earned Donna Mills the NECC Player of the Week honor in softball.

It was sophomore third baseman Tom Davis who earned the right to be named Rookie of the Week for baseball in the NECC. He went (9-16) at the plate in five games with a double and 6 RBI's. Davis defends his hot career and will definitely be a strong force, for the River Hawks next year. Positioned next to Davis is Marc Deschenes, possibly the best short-stop in division II. He makes some of the most incredible plays on the field. With a glove like a ball magnet and an arm as any in the league, Deschenes is defensively amazing. It wasn't just his defense that earned him Player of the Week recognition, he is also in Lowell's pitching rotation. Last week he had 2 wins, one which perched them on top of New Haven for first place in the NECC.

Congratulations to all four of these UML athletes who made it possible to sweep the NECC in all categories.

Rec Sports Rock-Climbing a Success!

Connector Contributor

On Saturday, April 22nd, thirty-one brave souls ventured out to Windham, NH for a day-long course in rock-climbing. The group consisted of students and staff from UMass Lowell, most of whom had never attempted this type of activity before. The instructors, from White Mountain Adventures, spent most of the morning introducing the students to the equipment, safety, essential knots, and belaying techniques. After practicing these skills and breaking for lunch, the group was then off to conquer the rocks! Some of the climbs set up by the White Mountain Adventures staff were more challenging than others to give everyone the chance to try different levels of difficulty. In the end, all of the students were able to feel the success and confidence of reaching the top and "Kissing the Beaner." Congratulations to all who took the challenge—we look forward to another trip next fall!

UML Student clings to rock for dear life.

Sports Speak...with Drew Poirier

I can't believe it! The Celtics actually split the first two games of their series with the Orlando Magic, at the O-Rena, Sunday's 7-point victory over the Magic was only Orlando's third home loss of the season and first to a Eastern Conference team. Most importantly, the Celtics come home with a chance to win the series at the Garden by taking the games tomorrow and Friday night.

The Celtics played probably their best game in recent years, basically controlling play for the majority of the game. Dominique Wilkins had his best game in a Celtics uniform, seemingly hitting every shot he took. As much as Dominique helped the team, it was a team effort led by Sherman Douglas that was ultimately responsible for Shaq and company's demise. Sherman's running floater was in top form (except for one O'Neil rejection) and Pervis Ellison played huge, having easily his best game of the year. Every player on the Celt's had a great game and that was the key to the victory, as well as Acie Earl not having to play.

When the Magic recovered from the Celtic's early lead and took a 5-point lead I figured we were in for another thrashing at the hands of mighty Orlando, but, Boston refused to buckle and went to the half tied. In the second half Boston attacked Orlando and went on to the huge victory.

Another thought on the play-offs. Does anybody notice anything familiar about the Chicago Bulls now that they have Michael Jordan back on the team? It looks to me that they have reverted back to the way they were before their run of 3 titles at the beginning of the decade. It seems as if Jordan is trying to do too much. Take Sunday's loss to Charlotte for example. At the end of the game, Jordan took it upon himself to throw up three-pointers from anywhere on the court in hopes of bringing the Bulls back. If Phil Jackson wanted 3's every time down the court wouldn't it have made sense for Jordan to drive to the basket, causing the defense to collapse to cover him; and then kick the ball out to Steve Kerr (the NBA's leading 3-point shooter) for the three? Hey Michael, a bit of advice; either duplicate your game one performance or start playing with the team and not despite your team, or this will be a short play-off run for you.

-Boston Red Sox win season opener over the Minnesota Twins 9-0. Jose Canseco goes 2-4 with 3 RBI in Red Sox debut.

-Dennis Connor will defend the America's Cup against Black Magic. Connor will be using Young America, one of the boats that he defeated in the Defender's Cup Finals. Connor will be using his own crew when he takes on the boat from New Zealand.

-NBA Upset of the season! After a humiliating 47 point loss on Friday night, the Boston Celtics defeated the Orlando Magic by 7 points to even the best-of-five series at 1-1.

-Jose Canseco and Mo Vaughn hit their first homeruns of the season for the Boston Red Sox in a 17-11 slugfest loss to the Chicago White Sox on Sunday.
